PARASHAT EKEV

The importance of preserving trees, particularly fruit trees, in an agrarian, largely arid climate is obvious. But so important are trees considered, hundreds of years later, the Talmud even prohibited shifting a stream away from them, fearing it would cause the tree's roots to wither. Not just trees are we forbidden to haphazardly destroy, but the wanton destruction of anything is forbidden. The reason being: the world ultimately belongs to God. As we're taught in this morning's Torah portion, daunting as the task might be, we're simply God's caretakers.

Join us for Kiddush after services sponsored by Judy and Ness Moadeb in honor of their 51st Wedding Anniversary; by Karen Gottlieb in memory of her grandmother, Anna Gottlieb, her brother, Kenneth Gottlieb, and her mother, Sarah Gottlieb; and by; Minda and Jeffrey Salberg and Robert Schechter and Elisabeth Klock in memory of Minda and Robert's father, Abraham Schechter. Thank you to all.
