

It's Often the Smallest Gestures

BY RABBI MICHAEL GOTLIEB

To help stem the downward spiral away from Jewish religious life and affiliation (a phenomenon that has been occurring long before the Covid-19 pandemic), we must reevaluate Jewish life from a host of different angles.

One suggestion/action-point I advocated during my Yom Kippur address this year, is the need to create warm, joy-filled and inspiring Jewish memories for our children (grown children included), grandchildren, nieces & nephews, and our friend's children (acknowledging not all of us have children).

One impressionable childhood memory I recall occurred during Hanukkah. We initially lived in Oak Park, Michigan later moving to Southfield (both suburbs of Detroit), and then on to San Diego.

I was roughly 8 years old. Never will I forget the image of our Hanukkah menorah placed on a windowsill up against a December, wintry cold window. The warmth emitted from the candles glowing indoors caused the window to completely fog up; it literally became opaque. Funny, I don't remember any of the toys I might have received that year, but I distinctly remember the brightly lit menorah next to the freezing cold window.

Two concrete suggestions to consider:

- 1) Find fellow adults with whom you share a similar approach to Judaism and Jewish practice. Have regularly held Shabbat and holiday meals in a setting that's welcoming and uplifting; one filled with passionate discussion and celebration. Children of every age know Judaism's important when they see committed adults taking it seriously.
- 2) Fill your house with quality Jewish books (notwithstanding the general shift away from hardbound books) and art. When the next generation of children/young-adults see beautiful Judaica (Israeli art in particular is exquisite), along with Jewish books filled with cogent ideas and explanations alongside secular art and books, that too makes a statement of the importance Judaism plays in the home.

As committed Jews, we can help create favorable Jewish memories that will remain with the next generation throughout their lives. That noble task is personal and based on individualized interactions. Heaven knows, it's often the smallest gestures that can have the most transformative and lasting impact. May it be so....

NEW MEMBER SPOTLIGHT

Welcome to the KM Family!

THE STEINHARDTS

Even though Simon, Bram and Solly have never set foot inside KM, it still feels like coming home. That's because Rachel attended religious school and was Bat Mitzvah'd there in the 90s (you may remember her parents, Marty and Norma Rosmarin). If you see her, please let her know what's new since she went off to college back in 2000.

Fast forward 20 years--Rachel and family just moved from the Hancock Park area to Santa Monica. Simon--originally from Chevy Chase, Maryland -- works in advertising and Rachel works in market research. Their two boys, Bram (6, in 1st grade) and Solly (4, in preschool) can't get enough of the beach, and are eager to invite new friends over to hang out in their treehouse.

THE SALIMANS

Hello - we are Lisa and Scott Saliman and we joined KM this new year. We moved to Pacific Palisades in 2018 from Encino and are enjoying the cooler weather and being close to the beach. Scott works for Rand in Santa Monica, which was the impetus for our move, and Lisa continues to work for a CPA firm in Woodland Hills, so a lovely commute through Topanga Canyon every day.

We have three young adult children -- Shayna, who is in New York and just started a masters program in International Affairs at Columbia; Mara, who is living here with us and working for The Jewish Federation while taking prerequisites to enter a masters program in Speech Pathology; and Aaron who is in his senior year at UC Berkeley studying Environmental Economic Policy and Sustainability.

KM seems to have much to offer in terms of community and we are looking forward to attending events, joining a havurah and meeting new people.

MY KM: WHY WE BELONG

MICHEL AND JACOLYN BRON

Sometimes you're just in the right place in the right time. That's what happened when Michel and Jacolyn moved to Santa Monica two months before they got married. They were looking for a Rabbi to marry them and came across Kehillat Ma'arav. "It was the perfect storm in terms of the location and the synagogue being Conservative—it was a good fit for us," Jacolyn shares. After they married, they took advantage of the free one-year synagogue membership. They've since been members for another eight and continue to find things they love about their Jewish home. "Everyone is very welcoming," Jacolyn says. "We have enjoyed the events, high holidays and inclusivity of it all. And, of course, it's so close by as well!"

"Everyone is very welcoming..."

This couple also found that they could quickly and easily get involved. Jacolyn has served for several years on the Membership Committee and is currently Membership VP. She also tapped into her marketing background to help with the recent website refresh. "At other, larger synagogues, it might take a while to get to know people and what the synagogue is all about," she says, "but for us, we welcome new members with open arms and say, 'Let's go!'"

Supporting Afghan Refugees

In Partnership with Jewish Family Services of San Diego

Carole Yellen, Senior Director of Strategic Partnerships for the Jewish Family Services of San Diego, shared this information on their work to resettle Afghan refugees. They are associated with HIAS in their campaign.

Jewish Family Services San Diego is actively assisting Special Immigrant Visa (SIV) recipients from Afghanistan. For over 100 years, JFS has been one of the primary refugee resettlement agencies in San Diego. We have already resettled 74 individuals (17 families) with SIVs from Afghanistan since August 6. Our staff and volunteers will remain at-the-ready to accept more families in the coming days, weeks, and months. As the situation is changing almost daily, we are updating www.jfssd.org/afghanrefugees to provide our community with the latest information and opportunities. That is a great link to share!

How can KM help?

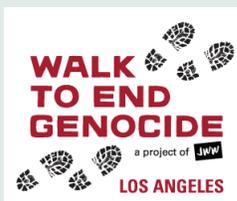

Financial Donations: Right now, the most impactful way to show support is to make a monetary gift which will help to fund the tremendous number of additional resources that are needed to welcome refugees with compassion and dignity.

Please visit the JFS website to donate directly to Jewish Family Services San Diego to assist in the resettlement of Afghan refugees. A contribution of any amount would be put to good use.

Thank you in advance for any assistance you provide.

IDEAS? Please let us know. If you have an organization or social action project you would like to bring to Kehillat Ma'arav and the broader community, contact Deb Berenbach, Social Action Chair, at laknitter@verizon.net.

LET'S EAT!

Pumpkin Challah

Recipe modified and provided by Judy Blake

A cinnamon spicy pumpkin flavored challah for fall!

You can make one bigger challah, or 2-3 smaller challot.

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 package active dry yeast (about 2 1/4 tsp)
- 1/2 cup warm water about 110 degrees F
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar plus 1 teaspoon
- 1 cup pumpkin puree (15 oz. can)
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
(OR 1/2 tsp nutmeg, 1/4 tsp allspice, 1/8 tsp ginger, Pinch cloves)
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 eggs: 1 egg yolk for the dough whisked and 1 egg yolk for the glaze
- 4 3/4 to 5 cups of bread flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- Pumpkin seeds poppy seeds, sesame seeds, etc for garnish
(Optional additions for the dough: Raisins; Mini parve chocolate chips)

INSTRUCTIONS

Let's start with the yeast! Place it in a large mixing bowl for a stand mixer and whisk with warm water and 1 teaspoon sugar (that helps activate the yeast). Let yeast stand until it foams and puffs up, about 10 minutes. If it doesn't get foamy, your yeast is bad or the water wasn't the right temperature, so try again!

Add veggie oil, 1 beaten egg, salt, pumpkin, spices and 4 cups of bread flour and mix it in my kitchen aid with a bread hook...mixing on #2 (low) for approx. 10min. and slowly adding more flour-stopping and feeling the dough that it isn't super sticky.

Then, using the whisk attachment for the stand mixer, mix in the remaining sugar, pumpkin, oil, vanilla, 1 egg and 1 egg yolk into the yeast mixture. Then add spices and combine and gradually add 3 cups flour and salt and either with a hook attachment using an electric mixer on medium speed or a spoon and your hands until combined. Knead for about 5-10 minutes, adding flour as necessary. Dough should be sticky, and finish kneading by hand on a counter until dough is smooth. Dough will get less sticky as you knead. Dough should be soft, smooth and slightly tacky.

Place the dough in a bowl greased with oil and cover. Let dough ferment in a warm place until it has at least doubled in size, about 2-3 hours. I let the dough rise on my counter with a tea cloth over it.

Now, time to braid! Place the dough on a lightly floured surface and punch down. Divide the dough in half or thirds depending on how many loaves you prefer to make.

(*I divided mine into 3 sections with different flavor options:)

1- plain pumpkin challah

1- added raisins to the dough for a raisin pumpkin challah

1-added mini-parve chocolate chips to the dough

Divide each section into three equal pieces, and stretch out into three strands. Secure the three strands at one end and braid until you reach the other end, then tuck the other pieces underneath the challah to secure. Repeat with other half.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F.

Carefully place the loaves on two parchment lined baking sheets, cover lightly with plastic wrap, ferment another 45 minutes or so until it's light and fluffy looking (exact proofing timing for challah will depend on environmental conditions.)

(I only do a second proof for as long as it takes to heat my oven after I finish braiding and brushing a beaten egg on it to make the challah shine and also hold on the seeds if you choose to put them on.)

Combine the last egg yolk with 1/2 tablespoon of water and brush generously over challah. Repeat to have two coats and sprinkle with seeds. Bake for 30-35 minutes, or until golden brown and with an internal temperature of 190 degrees F, rotating pans halfway through. (Flip around and switch rack position.) If the challot start to brown too fast, cover with foil until done.

Note from Judy. This challah was very moist and good. My family thought it should have a more pumpkin taste. They thought the raisins helped bring out the taste more. In the future, I would consider adding a little more spice and a few more raisins. Experiment and have fun!*

IN MEMORY OF RABBI MORRIS BAKER WRITTEN BY MANNY BAKER

My father, Rabbi Morris Baker, could be termed the Swiss Army Knife of Jewish religious life. He was authorized to perform any role a Jewish religious leader could perform. My earliest coherent memories of him was when he was the rabbi of Congregation Chevre Sholem in Jeannette, PA. I was three when we moved there, and even memories of my first year in Jeannette are hazy. During his tenure there, a shul was built, a Hebrew School and a Sunday School were established, and a lot of great programs were instituted to celebrate the holidays. We had some great Purim plays. The one that stands out in memory most clearly is the one set to the music of The Mikado. Haman replaced the Lord High Executioner, and was played by my brother Hy – a fitting role for him since he was the family troublemaker. And Simchat Torah (which just ended) was the cause for a glorious party. Everyone got called to the Torah, including us kids, and none of us could wait for our turn. For a town which has a population of 16,220 people according to the 1940 census, we had a large number of Jewish families, and a lot of Jewish kids. The crowning point of the evening was the party afterward. We brought in kosher deli from Pittsburgh, and we had a feast on salami, corned beef, and pastrami sandwiches.

It's on the High Holidays that I have my strongest images of my father. Chevre Sholem could not afford a rabbi and a chazan. So, my father (whom we called Pop rather than Dad), was not only the rabbi, but the chazan and ba'al kriyah as well. I can still picture him walking down the aisle toward the bimah chanting the Hineni. Pop was an old-time chazan, and you would always hear that kvetch in his voice (for want of a better description). As he pleaded on behalf of the congregation in the Hineni, it would sound like he was crying, and I often wondered if he might actually be. The same was true of the Untaneh Tokeph and the Neilah service. To this day, I have a strong sense of the solemnity and seriousness of these prayers. At Neilah, I can picture the gates slowly swinging shut with the message of grab this opportunity to pray for a good year to come.

My father gave me a good grounding on what it means to be a Jew, and I am grateful for that.

Ask the Staff!

It's here! We've designed our new synagogue "kveller" to focus solely on you, our community. We're looking forward to sharing each other's stories in the best way we know how.

While most of the content will be curated by our on-staff team, we need your help! One of our key features will be "Ask Us Anything"—think of it like David Letterman's Mail Bag!—where congregants will be able to ask a question about anything they'd like, and in each issue, a member of clergy or staff will expound on that specific inquiry. So go ahead—ask us anything! Questions can be sent using the online form in the weekly, or by emailing it to communications@km-synagogue.org.
